1. During the first term of the last year of study at the Medical Academy in Szczecin (Stettin), two to three hours daily are devoted to military studies (Studjum Wojskowe). The lectures and practical training are directed by a lieutenant-colonel (medical officer), who pays more attention to external military discipline (dress, salutes, etc.) than to military matters.
2. The lectures cover the following subjects:
  - a. Organization of armed forces health services.
  - b. Organization of advanced first-aid posts.
  - c. Evacuation of wounded from the first-aid post to the rear.
  - d. Records and reporting, etc, of a medical officer in an armed forces unit and in advance first-aid posts.
3. Practical training includes:
  - a. Use of map and compass.
  - b. Drill, without arms.
  - c. Drill of stretcher cases.
  - d. Carrying the wounded from the battlefield during battle.
  - e. Carrying the stretcher cases in various types of terrain.
4. The theoretical material as well as the practical training are, in fact, only a repetition and review of subjects studied in previous years of study.
